What it is

A single web page that works on any phone or computer. It answers the questions a newcomer asks in their first year — a health card, a SIN, a BC licence, a bank account, a school place, a tax return, a doctor without a family doctor, a withheld deposit, a month when money runs out — as short cards: the steps, what to bring, the office to go to (with hours and a map pin), the cost, the wait, the deadline, and the sentence to say at the counter. Behind the cards sits a map of 287 places across every Kamloops neighbourhood — government offices, clinics, schools, libraries, groceries, transit, food banks, legal aid — each one carrying its own verification date and source.

Why it may be useful to the City

- Front counters and phones. Staff can hand a resident a link, a printed card, or a QR flyer instead of explaining the same five steps again in a language they may not share.
- Six languages, one source. Every card, note and label exists in English, French, Spanish, Chinese, Korean and Japanese — translated by a person, not a widget.
- Nothing to procure, host or sign. It is free to use and to print, needs no account, stores no personal information, and runs on its own infrastructure. The City takes on no data, no contract and no cost.
- Honest about what it is. It calls itself a personal reference, not an official source; every card links to the official page it was checked against and shows the date; corrections are made within five working days.

How to try it in two minutes

1. Open `https://kamloops-lifemap.neilxiang.workers.dev` on a phone. Choose a language at the top.
2. Tap “How do I…?” and open Apply for MSP. Read it as a resident would, then tap Print this card.
3. Back on the map, tap Open now, then Bus Routes and pick a route — every stop is named.

> Ask. If the City would like printed flyers for a counter, a version scoped to one department’s services, or a walkthrough for staff, write to neilxiang@hotmail.com. There is no charge.
